A NOTE FROM DR. STEIN

Hello stakeholders of SAS! Did you know you were a stakeholder in an educational institution? Being a stakeholder means you contribute and support a business financially, and you care about how the business is conducted. So, as the leader of the educational institution, I think it's time to ask: how do you think we're doing? Are there areas we are excelling at? Areas we should improve? Please take a moment or two to send me a quick email (misty.d.stein@gmail.com) and let me know!

We've been getting 'down and dirty' in Science this week. Lower graders have begun their study about the Earth, it's crust, and it's physical properties. We had boiled eggs to label and compare. The egg shell was the Earth's crust, the white was the mantle, and the yolk was the core. What a fun way to stretch our minds and learn a concept that is so bi-i-i-i-g.

Upper graders are learning about pressure, torque, and changing matter. They had to line sugar cubes up and watch what happened when you exerted a certain amount of pressure to them (with different objects, including a hammer.) Isn't it amazing to think that God's world is ever changing and we get a chance to learn about it as we grow. How come there aren't adult science classes? I'd attend something like that! Be jealous of our students as they get to explore God's Amazing Creation.

Home and School

I just wanted to make a quick note to say 'Thank you' to those who have expressed interest in helping with our rummage sale coming up in April. We are very excited for this event. If you or someone you know is good at marketing, please contact me, Mrs. Kellie, so I can get you the info. We need to help spread the word. Also, I know it's frustrating when you have things you want to get rid of now and the rummage sale isn't until April, but please try to hang on for a little longer. We physically just don't have the space to start collecting items just yet. We will be collecting the whole week before the sale. We already have some volunteers to help organize and price but we are in need of more so if you can and would like to help, please let me know. The more people we have to help the better! Also there will be a bake sale as well. So we will need some to help with that part as well! We will need at least 2 people to run the table and several to donate homemade baked goods the evening before the event. Pray on it, and let me know what you can help with.
